IAP2 Federation Looks towards Certification Program to Advance Professional Recognition

It's a challenge that professionals in more than one growing, but relatively unknown industry have faced: what can you do to become recognized by potential clients as a professional in your service area? Many professional bodies turn to certification to legitimize and support their members.

At an international level, IAP2 has also identified certification as a critical step in promoting recognition of P2 practitioners' professional knowledge and experience. Certification adds credibility to a field. Professional engineer, certified management accountant, and registered nurse associations offer a few notable examples of the potential of certification programs.

Within the growing P2 industry, professional certification will be an official recognition that an individual has achieved a specified level of knowledge, skills, and/or abilities. These certification requirements will be established through an international task force with representation from IAP2 Canada and IAP2 affiliates from other regions.

IAP2 Canada celebrates the establishment of the task force as momentum towards its strategic direction of advancing the practice of P2. At the IAP2 Canada is pleased to support the 3rd Annual Summit on Public Consultation & Engagement. It's a unique opportunity for professionals with a public participation or stakeholder engagement mandate to gain winning strategies and innovative solutions. same time, it recognizes the task force as a critical opportunity to ensure Canadian members' interests are represented in international initiatives. Once the certification program has been developed, IAP2 Canada will be the accrediting body that ensures individuals in Canada qualify for certification and issues certification to them on an ongoing basis.

If you have an interest or background in accreditation or certification programs, IAP2 Canada needs you to represent Canadian members in raising the bar for the profession on the international task force. Please email info@iap2canada.ca with the subject line "International Certification Task Force" by October 31st, 2013.

President's Message

Anne Harding, President, IAP2 Canada

Greetings all!

Last newsletter, I told you that IAP2 Canada is carefully considering the value proposition of membership. This newsletter, I wanted to share with you the value I've found in IAP2 Canada.

Being part of the "P2 family" offers me the opportunity to connect with a local, national, and international community of practitioners working to improve public participation.

As a fellow member, you can also find this national and international community at events like the IAP2 North American Conference (in Winnipeg next September) and local community at events like the BC Chapter's upcoming AGM or Wild Rose Chapter's monthly Coffee Klatches.

This community also shows up in the volunteer opportunities to further our profession on an international scale, like the development of an accreditation program for P2 professionals.

Beyond the IAP2 Certificate program, there are some great ways to help you develop your own P2 practice and keep abreast of innovative practices. The Wild Rose Chapter is offering some great training this fall to round out your P2 practice. IAP2 Canada has just launched its national mentorship program, which pairs newer practitioners with experienced IAP2 practitioners in a 9 month learning relationship.

We also offer monthly webinars on hot topics in public engagement. Best of all are the discounts members receive for these learning organizer and the presenter(s); the October webinar had 65 people taking part.)

When you click on that, there's a form to fill out and you'll get your instructions on how to log in when the webinar starts.

We're getting great feedback on the webinars, and please note that the December 10 webinar is an opportunity for you to be engaged yourselves, by submitting ideas for upcoming topics through 2014!

Save the Date: 2014 IAP2 North American Conference

IAP2 Canada, together with IAP2 USA, is pleased to announce that the 2014 IAP2 North American Conference will be held in Winnipeg next year. Reserve September 28-30, 2014 to be part of the conference. Watch our site for more conference details.

opportunities. Between our monthly webinars ($50 value), the recent IAP2 North American Conference ($200 discount), and Strategy Institute's Annual Summit on Public Consultation (15% discount) and the Wild Rose Chapter courses ($50 discount), members can save over $600 this Fall alone. Now if that isn't a good deal, I don't know what is!
